

When you need someone with a creative eye and flair for design consult Mary Fox, a multimillion-dollar real estate professional and former art teacher. She started her career in real estate over twenty years ago and has consistently sold houses worth more than five million dollars a year for the past ten years. A life member of the multi-million dollar residential sales and listing, sponsored by the Counsel of Residential Specialists, she attributes her success to a combination of imagination, good taste and patience. She enjoys sharing her knowledge of design and decorating with buyers who are seeking the perfect home in which to grow and raise a family. Frequently, her customers have an idea about what they want but lack the vision to imagine what a potential purchase could look like fixed up. Mary is gifted in this area. She's able to work with clients to select a house with "promise" from thousands of listings. She often has an epiphany about how a house will appear with new landscaping, a renovated kitchen, new furnishings, color and window treatments. As a result, she saves her customers time and frustration. Perceptive and insightful, she has a knack for translating a client's dreams into reality.

She cultivated her artistic abilities long before her life in real estate began as a painter and art teacher. Originally from Wauwatosa Wisconsin, Mary taught art and English to elementary and junior high children in Elm Grove Wisconsin and later in the Montgomery County School System. After she married and while her children were growing up, she volunteered as a docent for eight years at the Corcoran Gallery. She also created stage sets and costumes for plays at her children's private schools at Sheridan, Maret, and Georgetown Prep. Handicapped elementary school children enjoyed the art classes she conducted for them in the public schools. In addition, she appeared as a special guest on television art shows under the auspices of WETA, where she taught painting and sculpture techniques. She also designed and presented workshops in elementary art education for teachers who represented 13 schools within Montgomery County school system. Other teaching experiences involved creating an after school program for latch key kids at St. Paul's, a church in Montgomery county.

After graduating from the University of Wisconsin with a major in Art and English, she went on to graduate school at Marquette University where she studied English literature.

Mary's career in real estate began in 1980 at Boss & Phelps. She now works for W.C & A.N. Miller Realtors, where she's been a Sales Associate for the past 18 years, specializing in residential sales. She is licensed to sell real estate in Washington, Maryland and Virginia. Among her hobbies are caring for her Burmese Mountain dog, Sophie, painting, swimming, and reading. She married Charles S. Asmar, Jr., an engineer and lawyer, after moving to the Washington area. They reside in Chevy Chase, Maryland where they have been blessed with three children and five grandchildren.

Energetic, experienced, and dedicated, Mary can help you turn a house with potential into your dream home.
